When one thinks of shipwrecks in this part of the world, the myth of the cursed "Bermuda Triangle" may come to mind. This is a reasonable thought as many ships had their last voyage in this region. Though some shipwrecks do remain a mystery, most ships saw their end in this region caused by bad weather or gunfire.

This map illustrates many of the shipwrecks in the Caribbean Sea region, what caused their doom, and when they went down.

Data Source: WWU, 2007; USGS Caribbean Shapefile, 2005; www.shipwreckcentral.com

Mercator Projection
Adam Norbjerg, 2007